

Tips for Solid Prep for the SAT

A great SAT score can save thousands of dollars for a college education!

My daughter receives an academic scholarship simply based on her SAT scores and academics. $1000 is $1000. In the world of college funding, you try to get every dollar you can for free. Preparing for the SAT can help in this aspect.

Here are a few sound ways to help your college-bound child prepare for this momentous exam:

- ❖ Take practice tests at least 3 times weekly. Your child can take these tests over multiple times. Time your kid's test to simulate the testing environment.
 - Practice tests can be found on the College Board's Website. There are also keys and explanations included for each practice test.
- ❖ Download and use a daily practice app from your app store on your phone.
- ❖ If your child continuously misses the same type of math problem on practice tests, have him or her practice this concept on special math websites. Just google the concept, and choose the website that best fits his or her needs. Example websites will be in a future resource.
